Re Item V

Reasoned statement with regard to novelty, inventive step or industrial applicability:
citations and explanations supporting such statement

1. Reference is made to the following documents:

D1: GB 681098
D2: WO 03066143
D3: WO 03000319
D4: US 4722728
D5: US2002055712

Novelty Article 33(2) PCT and Inventive Step Article 33(3) PCT

2. The present application does appear to meet the criteria of Article 33(1) PCT, because the subject-matter of claims 1-5 is new and inventive in the sense of Article 33(2) and (3) PCT.

The document D1 is regarded as being the closest prior art to the subject-matter of claim 1 and discloses (the references in parentheses applying to this document) a. a needleless injection device comprising (figures 1-13):

- a lower part (36)
- an upper part (34)
- energy store units (90,56)
- a start unit (90)
- supplementary units (56)
- lock means (74,80)
- means for releasing the lock (76)
- a long tube of the lower part (36)

The subject-matter of claim 1 therefore differs from this known hypodermic syringe in that:

- a long tube of the lower part, with external thread, stretches into the upper part and at the bottom fits into the short internal thread of the adjoining part of the upper part

INTERNATIONAL PRELIMINARY REPORT ON PATENTABILITY
(SEPARATE SHEET)

International application No.

PCT/HU2004/000083

- the lower part is attached to the upper part revolving manner, moving in a telescopic way, and results the tension state of the energy store units
- at least one start unit capable of storing minimum 60%, preferably 80-90% of the total discharge energy, with the reversible elastic distortion at max. 25%, practically 15-20% of the internal length of the agent cartridge
- the start unit is a bundle of polyurethane springs fitted inside the device in a separate case, at stretching it is joined with the mean transferring the stretching power, preferably with the lock mechanism, by a spacer, having no contact with other energy store units

The problem to be solved by the present invention may therefore be regarded as how to enable the optimal store amount of energy and to release it always at the optimal time and speed suitable.

No document of the search report discloses a such needleless injection device.

It is not evident to have to modify the needleless injection device of document D1 to solve these problems. There is no indication in the document of the search report to use the mean for stretching the springs and the start unit composed by polyurethane springs.

Therefore the subject matter of claims 1-5 is considered to meet the requirement of Article 33 (1) PCT in respect of novelty and inventive step.
